

Learning by Acknowledging the Differences

by Kathy Khang, p. 58

Columnist Kathy Khang explores the changing landscape of evangelicalism in the wake of an unusual election.

1. Can you identify with the three post-election groups of people Kathy Khang describes? Which response is most like you?
2. Khang says, “I don’t believe that trusting in God relieves us of responsibility to engage in and with the world.” Do you agree or disagree?
3. Where do you most often express your views about religion and/or politics? In smaller groups, one-on-one, rallies and marches, social media?
4. How do differing racial, ethnic, and gender identities influence your views on religion and politics?
5. How have you seen views of evangelicalism changing since the elections?
