

Active Voice

p. 50

Kathy Khang talks about her new book and how it speaks into today's culture.

1. Kathy Khang encourages others to speak out about injustice in whatever ways they are most gifted—education, protests, the arts. In what way do you most often raise your voice?
2. Do you agree that “silence is complicity”? Why or why not?
3. Khang uses the story of Esther to illustrate that God invites us to participate in his work by raising our voices. In what area do you think God is inviting you to take action?
4. What constructive and helpful ways have you found to raise your own voice?
5. How is your church engaging in the #MeToo or #ChurchToo movements?
