

The Good News of Taco Tuesday

By Ric Wild, p. 36

Finding community, one meal at a time

1. When you share a meal with friends do you most often eat in a restaurant or invite them to your home? Do you think it matters where the meal occurs?
2. How many biblical moments can you name that depict Jesus eating a meal with others?
3. Ric Wild says, “Our fast-paced, hyper-individualized, tech-saturated world has left us simultaneously more connected and more alone than ever before.” Where do you see this most evident in your own social circles?
4. In what ways could eating a meal with others be considered a spiritual discipline?
5. Wild ties the holiness of eating with others to showing people what heaven looks like. How do the two relate?
